Sentence structure for - I wish I had

"I wish I had" is an English expression used to convey regret, longing, or a desire for a different reality regarding a past action or a present situation.

The phrase "I wish I had" is correct and usable in written English. You can use it to express a regretful feeling for something that you don't have but desire. For example, "I wish I had the time and money to take a vacation this summer."

I wish I had + [noun/past participle]: Refers to a desire in the present or a general regret.eg..

- I wish I had a bigger house.
- I wish I had a car
- I wish I had bought a car.

I wish I had had: Refers specifically to a regret about a completed situation in the past (e.g., "I wish I had had the chance to meet her"). Eg...

- i wish I had had my lunch before leaving.
- I wish I had had bought a car last year.
- I wish I had had given her money for her daughter's treatment and now she is no more.

Situation	Correct Usecase
You regret not purchasing a car.	I wish I had bought a car.
You regret not owning a car in the past	I wish I had had a car.
You don't have a car right now.	I wish I had a car.

I +had + had

Meaning: It signifies "before then" (more past than another past event).

Examples:

"I had had [past perfect] a long day before I finally went to bed [simple past]." "By the time the guest arrived, I had had enough."

Understanding had and had had

Had (simple past) - Describing situations happened in the past
Had had (auxiliary verb + past participle of the main verb "to have") had - the past simple tense of 'to have'.

had had - the past perfect tense of 'to have'.

I had breakfast - when you are explaining your day, you use this to say what you did in the past "I had breakfast at 9 this morning"

I had had breakfast - also in the past, before another action from the past. "I had had breakfast already when she called me this morning to ask me to meet her". It also implies the breakfast was finished, otherwise it would be "I was having breakfast when she called". Here can also say I had eaten breakfast instead of 2nd had.

We had power - U had power in the past but now u Don't have.

We had had power when world war started - simply say we had had power makes no clear sense if there is no sequential events involved.

The past perfect tense of had had talks about something in the past that was interrupted by another event/action.

- I had had my breakfast when the phone rang.
- I had had my breakfast before she woke up.
- She became angry that I had had my breakfast.

Understanding has/have had and had had

Have/Has had (Present Perfect): Used to connect a past experience with the present, usually for actions continuing up to now.

Eg...

- I have had this car for five years.
- I'm not feeling well. I have had a headache all day.
- She has had three children in the past five years.
- We have had some problems with our computer systems recently.
- He has had two surgeries on his back.

Had had (Telling about past events , no talks whether that situation persist in the present moment or not)

- Last weekend I just wanted to relax because I had had a busy week.
- The director told me he had had a meeting with the president.
- We had had some trouble with our washing machine, so we called a repairman.
- She woke up screaming because she had had a bad dream.

It's also common to have another word in the middle of have had, has had, or had had:

- We've recently had some problems with our computer systems.
- He's just had two surgeries on his back.

Use of will in different situations will for 2 concurrent actions happening in future-

1. Parallel events -> while I will be cooking she will be setting the table
2. Sequential events -> First I will finish my work than I go to gym., Conditional events -> If it rains , than I will stay at home.
3. In case of when,after, before,as soon as, until -> I will meet u when u come. , When I reach home, my dog will be waiting for me on the porch
4. Future perfect -> Sam will have taken a holiday by next week. , By the time you get home, I will have cooked dinner.

Sentence structure for 2 events happening in the past -

When there are multiple sequence of events happening in the past , always makes sentences in simple past.

For 2 past events -> Use past perfect (had + v3) for the earlier action (the "past-past") to show it happened before another action, and simple past for the later action or sequential events. Example: "The train had left (earlier) when I arrived . (The leaving happened before the arrival).

- She failed the exam because she had not studied.
- We laughed about the time we had snuck out of the house.

If Chronology is clear, so past perfect is not strictly needed. If you use "before" or "after," you can often use Simple Past for both.

eg..

- The train left before I arrived.
- She bought food and cooked dinner.
- She fell and broke her leg.
- She threw up because of the spoilt food.

For simultaneous actions using as, when or while

1. Events synchronous happening (in synchronisation with time) -> I broke my leg when I was skiing. , We were watching television when the power went off. , When the guests arrived, Jane cooked dinner.

2. Events coincidentally happening (at the same point of time or at the same place)

As I was going to work, I saw an old friend.

3. Contemporaneous Events (happening presently in the same period of time) -> While I was studying, I suddenly felt sleepy. , When the guests arrived, Jane was cooking dinner.
